What OTC is building OTC is organising United States summer enquiries into clearer family-facing routes so families can distinguish between elite academic programmes, pre-college campus life, institute-style subject exploration and longer-form preparation before they shortlist providers.	Why the United States For many families, the United States remains the strongest market for visible pre-college branding, subject breadth and campus experience. The challenge is not availability, but choosing the right academic density, supervision model, city and price level before applying.

Initial United States Focus

Yale Young Global Scholars Elite academic / residential	A strong high-academic route for families looking at serious discussion, interdisciplinary learning and top-tier peer environment.
Columbia Pre-College NYC residential / commuter / College Edge	Useful for families who want clear New York positioning, visible pre-college structure and differentiated campus/city options.
Brown Pre-College Research / leadership / STEM / pre-bacc	An unusually broad route family that supports academic, leadership and longer-form progression demand in one ecosystem.
Berkeley / UCLA / UChicago Campus / institute / immersion routes	Strong West Coast and Chicago route mix for campus life, subject institutes and different academic intensities.

What direct cooperation would improve

Clearer family screening before high-value enquiries reach admissions teams · better expectation-setting around age, housing, supervision and visa timing · more accurate matching between academic strength and route intensity · stronger referral quality for serious-fit families.

Current cooperation boundary

OTC is currently approaching United States summer routes through a careful family-screening and provider-contact model. No public promise is made regarding guaranteed placement, exclusive representation, commission structure or direct appointment without written provider confirmation.

Next step

OTC seeks a practical first discussion on family-facing referral flow, suitable student profile, admissions routing, housing / supervision explanation and whether selected United States summer routes may support a more direct cooperation structure.
